Conference summary

On the 2-4th of December 2022, ACAVENT organized the 4th world conference on teaching and education which focused on two broad fields of research (teaching and education) to bring researchers together to explore the recent findings of their field of expertise. The conference took place at Hotel Mercure Paris 15 Porte De Versailles, Paris-France. The conference was open to researchers, scientists, graduate and post-graduate students, as well as representatives of for-profit and non-profit organizations, research institutions, and government agencies.

The 4th world conference on teaching and education was a great opportunity to meet researchers in different specialties of teaching and education from all over the globe (USA, Turkey, Algeria, Greek, Oman, indonesia, Belgium...etc). The event is attended by academics from different fields of teaching, education, and applied linguistics, and various topics were discussed in relation to the conference theme like: online formative assessment, metacognitive writing strategies, blended learning, the art of teaching, critical thinking in language learning, and academic education. The conference was divided into three sessions: in-person, virtual, and poster presentations.

The conference atmosphere helps young researchers to network with fellow colleagues and to get inspired by different research papers that were presented at the conference. During the conference, attendees shared opinions, suggests, and recommendations to consider in the upcoming works. In addition to the conference sessions, a city tour was organized with a guide to help the participants explore the most beautiful places in central Paris and its historical background.
